People who deal in futures, like stock brokers, investment bankers and others, know the value public confidence has in dollars and cents. Therefore it occasionally happens that a stock broker who above all persons might be suspected of bearing a grudge against an over-regulated government, rises up to point out the difference between constructive criticism and simple "calamity howling."

Norway Sues for Peace; Italy Turns Out a Huge Fleet

Big Concentration Reported in Mediterranean

DODECANSE ISLES

British-French Fleet at Alexandria Egypt

STOCKHOLM —(AP)— Dispatches from Grog, Norway, Friday night said the Norwegian command announced the conclusion of hostilities in the Grog area, east of Norway, and the Norwegians' intention of negotiating peace with the Germans.

ATHENS —(AP)— Information reaching diplomatic quarters in Athens Friday said Italian troops, warships and fighting planes were being concentrated in large numbers at the Dodecanse islands in the eastern Mediterranean.

ANKARA —(AP)— Franz Von Papen, German ambassador to Turkey, was authoritatively reported Friday to have been called urgently to Berlin for a conference with Adolf Hitler, and to have arranged to leave Friday night.

The Dodecanse islands are an Italian-owned group in the Aegean sea between Greece and Turkey, approximately 400 miles distance northwest of Alexandria, Egypt.

The Italian concentrations were reported especially heavy at the island of Rhodes, 375 miles from Alexandria.

At Trondheim, Norway, the entrance of German troops in this sector was awaited at any moment—perhaps within 24 hours.

As a result of the new withdrawal north of Trondheim following the removal of Allied forces from the Valdnes region south of Trondheim it is believed that the war in Norway is virtually finished.

It can now be stated freely that the Stenjkjor fighting proved somewhat disastrous for the British.

In heavy fighting on April 21, an entire British battalion was cut up by German company (a company is about one-fourth the size of a battalion).

What really hindered the Germans from advancing for several days past had been the heroic defense by Norwegian volunteer units.

By the Associated Press
The British force and their French "Blue Devil" allies were reported Friday to have withdrawn from their front and landing place above as well as below Trondheim, the German-held.

Prosecutor Harris of El Dorado, Is in Race for Congress

Native of Hempstead County 7th District Candidate

NOW PROSECUTOR

Harris Completing Second Term at El Dorado

Oren Harris, of El Dorado, prosecuting attorney of the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit, announces his candidacy for congress from the Seventh Congressional district, comprising Hempstead, Nevada, Clark, Lafayette, Columbia, Ouachita, Union, Calhoun, Bradley, Ashley and Chicot counties.

Mr. Harris is well known to the people of this District. Born and reared in Hempstead county, he is the son of the late Homer Harris, former County Examiner and Tax Assessor of Hempstead county and a brother of Willie Harris, former Treasurer and Circuit Clerk. He received his early education in the rural schools of this county, and graduated from Prescott High School, Prescott, Arkansas. He obtained his A. B. Degree from Henderson-Brown College, Arkadelphia, and his Law Degree from Cumberland University Law School, Mr. Harris is 36 years old, married, and the father of one child, a daughter, a member of the First Baptist Church of El Dorado, and active in civic affairs.

Is Prosecutor
Active in the practice of law for the past ten years, Mr. Harris has served as deputy prosecuting attorney of Union county, and is now completing his second term as Prosecuting Attorney for the district, where he has made an outstanding record, and successfully prosecuted many important and outstanding cases.

In discussing his candidacy, Mr. Harris states: "I am seeking this office upon my own merits as a lawyer, a citizen, and the experience that I have had with public affairs. I will devote my entire time and energy to the duties of the office, and will honestly and conscientiously represent the people of this District to the best of my ability. A believer in aggressive principles, I think the people of this District are entitled to have an energetic representative in Congress."

"I believe that the Nation can and should stay out of war, and remain free from those policies that would involve the United States in a war, and I will oppose any action that will lead us into conflict, unless it is necessary defense of our country and citizenship. However, I think that we should maintain an Army and Navy capable of protecting our rights and Country."

"I will advocate those policies which promote industrial development of the South, elimination of unemployment, and equal rights and opportunity for laboring people to obtain living wages; a permanent soil conservation program, and an agricultural program giving to farmers their just share and equal rights of living standards; old age assistance to the needy persons of this State, regardless of the State's ability to match; adequate flood control, and the preservation of our waters and game and fish life; equal benefits and assistance for education by the Federal Government; and the establishment of another Military Academy located in the South, and a Naval Academy in the West for the education and training of officers for our Army and Navy."

For State Regulation
"I am opposed to the Federal control of crude oil production, and believe that the production of such natural resources should be regulated by the States."

"I will give my every effort in obtaining equality for the South, the elimination of trade barriers, and freight rate discrimination."

"I will oppose any increase of taxes on our people and lend my endeavors to the balancing of the Federal Budget."

"I will make an active campaign and discuss from time to time the policies and principles of interest to the people of this District and will greatly appreciate the vote and support of the Democratic voters, and if elected, will compensate you for the honor by faithful, honest, diligent and efficient service to all of the people of this District."

Adkins to Run for Governor, Report

Rumor That U. S. Revenue Collector Will Resign

WASHINGTON —(AP)— a well-informed official on Arkansas politics said here Friday that Homer Adkins, Little Rock, intended resigning as collector of internal revenue for Arkansas to become a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Declining to permit use of his name, he said Adkins' announcement of his candidacy would be made in Little Rock within a few days, and that his resignation as collector would be submitted no later than May 15.

Adkins to Washington
LITTLE ROCK —(AP)— A trip to Washington by Homer M. Adkins, internal revenue collector for Arkansas, widely mentioned as a possible candidate for governor, stirred speculation in political circles here Thursday.

Washington advices gave no information as to the nature of his business in the national capital. He was reported on route back to Little Rock Thursday night.

Most observers are convinced that Adkins will make the race. If so he would have to resign his office as internal revenue collector due to provisions of the Hatch act regulating political activity of federal employees.

The probability of a major political struggle between the forces of Governor Carl E. Bailey's administration and those closely linked with federal patronage in the state has been forecast for months in all quarters.

Although Bailey has made no public statement on the question of a third term, and has declined to discuss the matter in off-the-record press conferences, even the lowest-salaried stenographer at the state-house would deride any suggestion that he would not run again.

Reporters who a few months ago were asking the governor if he would seek re-election now ask only the question: "When are you going to announce?" They've received no answer to either question.

As mute as Bailey and Adkins on political plans were three others talked as possible candidates. They are Attorney General Jack Holt, Lieutenant Governor Bob Bailey and former Congressman John L. McClellan of Malvern. There'll have to be a decision, by all by May 15, final day for filing.

U. S. Ship Struck at Bergen Harbor

Machine-Gun Fire of Bomber Rakes Deck of Freighter

NEW YORK —(AP)— British machine-gun fire from a bomber over Bergen harbor raked the deck of the American freighter Flying Fish during a recent battle between Allies and German forces, members of the crew said Friday in an NBC broadcast when the ship arrived in New York.

The description of the hostilities in the war-torn Scandinavian port was the first to reach this country. Capt. W. W. Wollaston, native of Denver, Colo., also said the Flying Fish hit in a battle between German sea forces and British aviators.

The slide fastener was invented by Whitcomb Judson in 1893, but Gideon Sundback later improved and patented it.

Expansion of U. S. Industrial Concerns Urged by Vandenberg

Says Atmosphere Needs Changing to Bring Recovery

Must End Hostility and Uncertainty Toward Business

"WHIMSTANDARD"

Declares Floating Powers of President Need Repeal

This is the third of six articles in which leading presidential candidates tell John T. Flynn, noted economist and writer, how they propose to bring about recovery if elected.

By JOHN T. FLYNN
NEA Service Special Correspondent

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, candidate for the Republican nomination for President, is one of those who believe the atmosphere of the nation must be changed before any real recovery can be brought about.

"I asked the leading candidates to tell me what the next President must do to put an end to borrowing, to revive private investment, to create jobs in industry."

"The first thing we must do," said the senator, "is to create an utterly different atmosphere. The time is here and the need for tremendous investment in equipment of railroads, industrial plant, buildings, utilities."

"Our industrial plant has an accumulated obsolescence of $15,000,000. We have plenty of money and credit for this; we have more than enough. Industry cries out for funds. Investors hunger for an opportunity to supply them. Why do they not get together?"

"Most think of 1936"
"The reason is plain—the atmosphere. Industry and investors exist in an atmosphere of hostility and uncertainty. This is a profit system we live in. If it is no good we ought to get rid of it. But if we want to keep it—and we do—then we must have profits. A profit system without profits is unthinkable."

"But we have been singing hymns of hate against the profit-makers. Every investor and every enterpriser feels that the government is against him, penalizing him, harassing him."

"Who is the profiteer? Is he the manufacturer, the stockholder, the rail and utility enterpriser who must hire men and pay wages before he can make a profit. There is no use quibbling about this—the administration has succeeded in creating this feeling a feeling that this man is a public enemy. As long as this lasts investment is unthinkable."

"To end that we must first of all put into the White House a man and into Congress a party which everyone knows is not hostile to business. That act alone will produce, in a three, confidence—not just blind confidence, but an assurance that the government is not lying in wait for the man who starts a business, hires a laborer and makes a profit."

"But we must do more than just change parties. We must think not merely of 1940, but of 1950. We must change the personnel of the Securities Exchange Commission and eliminate from the act the provisions which make it so costly to put out an issue of a few hundred thousand or a million that no sane man will attempt it."

"We must change the personnel of the National Labor Relations Board, even if the act were not changed so that an employer will have a chance for his life. But we must also change the act to make it fair to both laborer and employer. We must once and for all put an end to all government competition with private business."

"We're on the Whimsical Standard"

"We must end not only hostility to business, but uncertainty. Therefore we must repeal all the floating powers of the President. Our currency now is based not on any metal, but on the President's whim. We are not on the gold standard, but on the whimsical standard."

"We must put an end to the President's power to change tariff schedules at will. No business is safe while this power exists. Congress must resume the powers which it has abandoned to the President."

"We have to overhaul our fiscal system. We have put a huge foundation of government spending under our system. We cannot junk it out."

Campaign to Be Launched Soon, Basye Announces

Five Principal Objectives for New Year Outlined

SEEK UNDERPASS

More Paving and Improved Highways Will Be Sought

Guy E. Basye, president of Hope chamber of commerce, announced Friday that a drive would be launched in Hope within the next few days for $5,000 which he said would be required for the chamber of commerce budget for the coming year.

Mr. Basye also announced principal objectives the chamber had outlined for the new year, as follows:

1. Construction of a Missouri Pacific railroad underpass.
2. To secure additional paving for city streets.
3. Trade-marking Hope watermelons.
4. Publication of an attractive booklet advertising Hope and Hempstead county.
5. Improvements of Highways No. 29 and 4.

Mr. Basye, in announcing the financial campaign, issued the following statement:

"As president of the Hope Chamber of Commerce, I am interested to see that the organization renders a real service to the citizens of Hope and Hempstead county. To do this, it needs the support of every individual company and corporation in Hope, not only financial support but the active interest of every person, the counsel, advice, time and effort."

"Since the success of the Chamber of Commerce will depend entirely on the extent of this support, I am urging every citizen to contribute his share not only to the financial support necessary to its success, but to the planning and execution of the work undertaken."

"The program of the Chamber of Commerce for the coming year will require a budget of $5,000 and if every one will give in proportion to his ability, it will not be a burden on any body. If towns like Prescott and Magnolia can raise that amount, surely Hope can do even better."

"Among the things to be done this year are: an underpass across the Missouri Pacific, more paving in Hope, trade-marking Hope watermelons, the publishing of an attractive booklet advertising Hope and Hempstead county, improvement of Highways No. 29 and No. 4. These are not all, but only a few of the larger things the Chamber of Commerce hopes to do. If you have suggestions, the Board will be glad to have them."

"The Board of Directors will, in the next few days, make a canvass of the city and when called on to make a contribution to the expense of the organization, I sincerely hope every one will do his full share."

Congressman Wins Two Dismissals

Begins Fight for Acquittal on Remaining Six Counts

GAINESVILLE, Ga. —(AP)— Representative B. Frank Whelchel (D-Ga.) won a dismissal in federal court Thursday of two counts charging sale of a rural postmaster's office, and began a fight for acquittal on six remaining counts.

Counsel for the North Georgia congressman promised the jury they would refute each prosecution charge and prove instead that Whelchel repeatedly rejected offers of financial aid.

Paul Carpenter, defense attorney, said his client would not deny having received $2700 from three persons, two of whom subsequently received postal appointments, but would show this money came to him as bona fide campaign contributions.

Judge E. Malvin Underwood disallowed evidence that Maynard Mashburn paid $500 for appointment as postmaster at Tate, Ga., and dismissed the two counts involved.

When a Union Cleans House

Chicago has produced many recent examples of what happens when gan-sters and hoodlums muscle into the union labor field. Intimidation and swindling of members, intimidation and blackmailing of employees has been the usual result. And all too often, perfectly straight-forward unions and perfectly honest union members have had to bear the brunt of indiscriminate attacks on these abuses.
The story of the cleanup of the Coal Teamsters' and Hikers' Union in Chicago shows what can be done when union members, union officers, and public authorities co-operate.
This is a very old union. In 1933, when repeal took away from Chicago gangsters the easy money of prohibition days, "Three-Fingered Jack" White and "Red" Barker, two notorious liquor gangsters, seized control of the Coal Teamsters' Union with blackjack and bullet. They looted its treasury, shook down business men, terrorized members who objected to their methods.
In 1933 a conference of responsible
A. F. of L. and Chicago Federation of Labor officials was held with the mayor and state's attorney. After an initial bad start, by early 1935 a "dictator" was installed. Leslie G.
Goudie, president of a teamsters' joint council brotherhood, found a sorry situation: men were paying the union $1 a day for the privilege of working, yet the union was broke and owed $25,000.
Goudie took hold. He cut dues to a reasonable point, had the books audited, began a business-like administration. For three years he had to ride in a bullet-proof auto and accept constant protection from the state's attorney's police.
But by 1937 he was able to turn the union over to its own officers, all veteran members. Today the union is out of debt, owns its own headquarters building, has $60,000 in the bank, pays sick and death benefits.
It took courage. It took cool personal bravery on the part of Goudie.
It took union officials on the part of higher union officials. But it was done. The men who make their living in the coal business are better off.
The employers are better off. The whole labor movement is better off, clearer.
Blanket condemnation of organized labor because of racket-infested situations like this one is unjust, precisely as blanket condemnation of "business" is unjust, precisely as blanket condemnation of "business" is unjust, simply because some business men improperly run. The remedy for both is housing down of the kind these Chicago teamsters have shown to be practicable.

HOW to EAT to BEAT the HEAT

By ALICE H. SMITH
Nutritionist, Cleveland Health Council

You Can Have Spring Tonic
And Like It, Too

Grandma was right about that spring tonic, except that you don't need to make it sulphur and molasses. Good food is enough—the year around.
The chief virtue of grandma's remedy was the iron it offered. It's the same iron is available in greens, both wild and cultivated, of which there are plenty now that sunny days are back.
And there's other food with generous amounts of iron; egg yolks, whole grain cereals, bread, liver (not necessarily calves' liver). Weight for weight, both beef and pork liver contain more iron than calves' liver.
Dried fruits offer iron, too—apricots, peaches, prunes, raisins. So do dried vegetables and nuts, particularly peanuts.
So you can have your tonic and like it, too. The iron needn't be as tough as it sounds. Try daily food grouping something like the following to be sure of your iron supply:
Group 1. Peanut butter sandwich made with whole wheat bread, fresh green vegetables, cooked or raw stewed prunes and apricots, a portion of liver and onions.
Group 2. Baked beans and brown bread, tossed green salad, scrambled eggs and whole wheat toast.
Everyone needs iron to maintain good health. The food suggested here will supply that for the ordinary case. There are types with anemia who need an extra supply of iron.
These persons should consult a physician.
The body, of course, demands other vital food constituents aside from iron.
The foods listed here will supply those.
Nature seems to have anticipated all the food wants of man. At any rate everything the body needs to keep it supplied in the world's food.
Eat the right things the year 'round and you will have had all the tonic you need.

NEXT: Color in your diet.

Brilliance

Be grateful for the kindly friends that walk along your way;
Be grateful for the smiles of blue that smile from day to day;
Be grateful for the health you own, the work you find to do,
Be grateful about you there are men less fortunate than you.
Be grateful for the growing trees, the roses soon to bloom,
The tenderness to kindly hearts that shared your days of gloom;
Acquire the grateful habit, learn to see how best you are,
How much there is to gladden life, how little life to mar!
And what if rain shall fall today, and you with grief are sad;
Be grateful that you can recall the joys that you have had.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Isaiah Comforts an Afflicted People, Gives Them Words of Hope, Comfort
Text: Isaiah 40:1-11

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

It is the widely held view of Biblical scholars that chapters 40 to 66 of the Book of Isaiah were not written by Isaiah but are from a prophet, or prophets, who lived toward the close of the Babylonian Exile, and shared the affliction of his people.

We are not concerned here with the question of authorship. The one thing that is clear is that whoever wrote, or spoke, the words of this chapter was speaking to a suffering and troubled people, ministering to them in words of comfort and hope.

Let us look back a moment on the political history of the Jewish people up to this time. The kingdom of an undivided Israel as we might think of it as existing under David and Solomon was broken up after Solomon's death by revolt of Jeroboam, whom 10 tribes followed to establish the Northern Kingdom, or the Kingdom of Israel. Two tribes remained loyal to Rehoboam to continue the Southern Kingdom or the Kingdom of Judah.

The Northern Kingdom was swept away in 722 B. C. when Sargon, the Assyrian conqueror, overthrew it and carried its people into exile, never to return. It is to this that we refer today when we speak of "the 10 lost tribes." The Kingdom of Judah continued until 586 B. C. when it was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar. The people were carried in exile to Babylon, by Cyrus in 538 B. C. was followed by a decree for the return of the Jewish exiles to the homeland.

What the Jews in Babylon suffered during the 50 years of their exile is vividly portrayed to us in the 137th Psalm, beginning, "By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion." There they discovered what they had lost in spurning divine counsels and in turning from the ways of God. The songs of Zion had a new meaning for them when they could no longer sing them either in their homeland or in a strange land.

The comfort that the prophet brings to this afflicted people is no word of shallow optimism. He comforts them through reviving their hope faith and vision. He assures them that God has not cast them away. They have paid the penalty for their sins.

There is one passage in the lesson that, if the interpretation of a friend of mine is correct, is almost universally misunderstood. It is the reference to the people as having "received of the Lord's hand double for all their sins." The usual interpretation is that it is a strong way of saying that the exiles have paid the full penalty.

My friend, who has traveled extensively in the east, says that the reference is really to the "double," an ancient practice followed everywhere in the east. If, and when, you take your laundry to a Chinaman, he tears a slip in two, giving you one half while he keeps the other himself. This is the "double," and it is your receipt. The meaning of the passage, under this interpretation, is that God has given the exiles the discharge of a full forgiveness.

Color of Columbia Caught in Novel by Nard Jones

In the flood of historical novels that have come from the publishers this year, there are a few that stand out. One of the few is Nard Jones' story of the Columbia, "Swift Flow the River" (Dodd, Mead; $2.50). Jones has captured the turbulence of the Columbia from source to ocean, mirrored it in the victory and tragedy of Caleb Paige, riverman.

Caleb was only a boy in 1856 when his parents were killed in an Indian massacre at Cascades, a few miles above Fort Vancouver. Mike Shea, one-time soldier, took the lad under his protection, taught him the ways of the river.

Caleb had little schooling, went gold hunting with Mike and an Indian, and staked a mining claim. When Mike was hurt, Caleb came down the river, on a raft, won the attention of rivermen, finally landed a job aboard a steamer.

From that time, Caleb's life was the river. Calm in his marriage to Mary and the birth of his son; stormy in his quarrels with Kirt Inge, and in his affairs with Victoria Hunt.

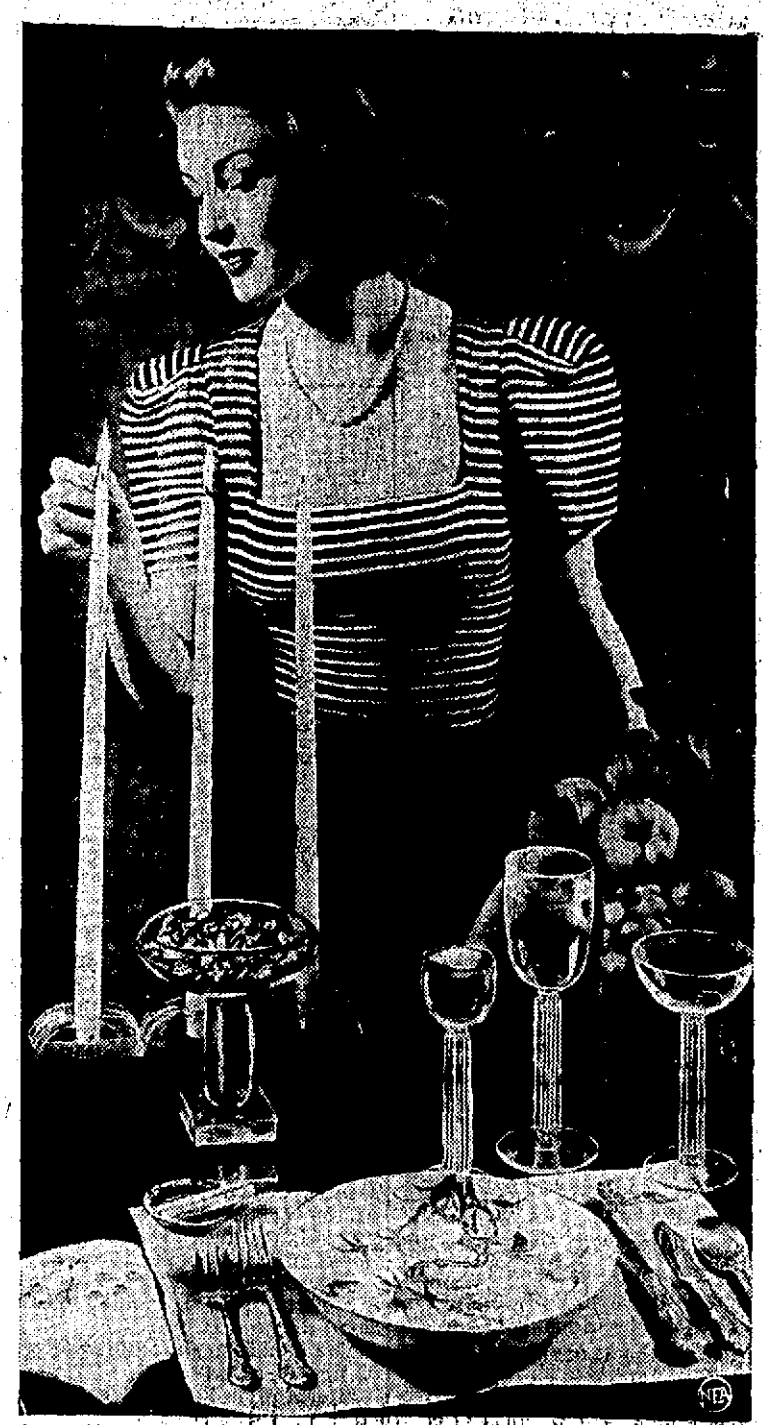

But the river has no place for a man's home life, and Caleb finally saw his wife and son growing away from him. Mike Shea gave his life to a debt. Caleb went back to the river alone, yet never without his memories, and the knowledge that Victoria and the river would always be his life.

Wed in Hospital—as Guests Wait at Church

Two hundred wedding guests waited in a Seattle Ore., church to see Henry N. Rise married to Phyllis A. Larsen. The bride finally appeared—quite late. Reason: Rise had just had an emergency appendicitis operation and the wedding had taken place in the hospital. The ceremony is pictured above. At left are bridesmaids Lois and Caryl Larsen, sisters of the bride. At right are Rev. O. L. Haavik, reading the service, and Ole Heggren, best man.

Consider Plan to Circulate Petitions Asking Repeal Betting, Divorce Laws

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)— Plans for circulation of petitions seeking repeal of Arkansas' pari-mutuel betting and 90-day divorce laws were revealed here Wednesday by the Rev. Claude L. Jones, pastor of the First Christian church of Hot Springs.
The minister said the plan was under consideration by the "Arkansas Better Government League" which he said was organized recently at Hot Springs and is now conducting a statewide membership campaign.
"We feel that pari-mutuel gambling is detrimental to the morals of the youth of Arkansas and that the state should have no part in commercialized gambling of any kind," he said. "We have no objection to horse and dog races being held, but we are violently opposed to betting upon them."
The state legalized pari-mutuel betting in 1935, levying a tax on the operations of horse and dog tracks. The state's only horse racing track is at Hot Springs and the only dog racing track at West Memphis. The 90-day divorce law, subject of much recent public criticism, was enacted in 1931. Mr. Jones visited the office of Secretary of State C. G. Hall Wednesday to obtain information on initiative petitions. He was told that petitions must be filed by July 6 and must bear signatures of 11,231 qualified voters.
The minister said the "Better Government League" was a reform movement domiciled at Hot Springs and that a headquarters and professional men would decide whether it would circulate the proposed petitions.
"A majority of the business men over there would tell you privately that they are opposed to horse race betting despite the fact that the races are held at Hot Springs," he said.

NEW YORK — The house can be a decorator's dream. The service can be superb and the hostess the essence of charm. But if the dinner table isn't attractive, and the food excellent, no guest is going to spend much time hoping that he'll be invited again—and soon.

There are no two ways about it, the appearance of the table is all-important. Sparkling glassware, gleaming silver, beautiful china and snowy linen, all subtly high-lighted by the glow of soft candle-light got any dinner off to a good start.

And, fortunately, nowadays, any hostess can have smart table accessories—at any price she can afford to pay.

Decorative new glassware comes in a wide range of prices. Made in America, it takes a back seat, so far as good design goes, to no other country in the world.

Beware of a Forest of Flowers.
The hostess who wishes to lend distinction to her table can do it easily by using American-made glass in some of the new designs, says Robert F. Flynn, one of New York's foremost stylists of smart table decorations.

"The newest crystal is streamlined, with modern patterns. Bowls individual bouquets on the table never have been more handsome."

Mr. Flynn highly recommends using flower-filled glass compotes, shallow glass candy dishes and even crescent-shaped salad bowls here and there on the table. He prefers them to a huge crystal centerpiece bowl, piled high with flowers over which guests cannot see and be seen.

"Ordinary garden flowers, set in these shallow containers, are attractive and unique," the table-setting stylist explains. "Also, I like to see heads of flowers floating in shallow bowls."

British Driven By Necessity to Sacrifice at Steinkjer — Johnson

By THOMAS M. JOHNSON
NEA Service Military Writer

The pathetic but heroic company of sacrifice detachments gains a new recruit in the force of British troops sent forth with no war experience and not enough equipment to battle the Germans at Steinkjer in Norway.

It sounds as if, once more in British history, someone had blundered. Arch blunderer is old Mars, the god of war. He simply will not play according to new rules the game of wide open warfare that now fascinates us in Norway.

American troops' no more experienced suffered losses similar to those reported and kept going.

In fact, American experience should shed light on why the British sent such troops to Norway.

Why did we grab machine gunners with even less experience and send them to stop the Germans at Char-teau-Thierry?

Why, when the alarm rings, is the nearest fireman first down the pole? Probably these new troops were the nearest to available transports, in an available harbor—which indicates the British had little intention of invading Norway as the Germans claimed.

Anyway, the British troops were hurried aboard and sent off without anti-aircraft guns.

They received no support from fighter planes. This apparently was because of the serious difficulty the British have found in establishing air bases in Norway—perhaps it was because the Germans had all the good ones.

Those first troops had no anti-aircraft guns, no artillery.

The whole thing reminds one of how Gen. George C. Marshall, now chief of staff of our army, found the 77th Division nearest the Argonne Forest and sent it there to fight, although it was composed of New York City men. It reminds one of how General Pershing and General Drum agreed that not only the 77th but eight other American divisions should attack with equipment stripped almost to nothing to make them more mobile.

And Marshall, Drum and Pershing are foremost soldiers.

And open warfare is open warfare. But the devil that drove the British was not military necessity alone. Political necessity loomed over the red-tapped shoulders.

Get troops to Norway, implore the foreign office. Anything to show the Norwegians and the world the British can and will help them if only they'll hold out.

The sacrifice detachment is no newcomer to British military history.

The most nearly parallel instance is what happened at Antwerp in 1914. Winston Churchill, then as now in the admiralty, sent to help the Belgians resist the invading Germans a force of British naval volunteers.

They were new and they were few. They fought an outpost fight.

They delayed the Germans long enough to prevent loss of the far more les are frothy dainty and ultra-smart. Sheer linen luncheon sets, in white and in pastel shades, with inset organdy medallions, are fresh and new.

For informal dining on porch or terrace, or under the trees, peasant cloths and napkins in flamboyant prints are popular.

The hostess who is determined that the cloth is going to stay in place when the table is set out on the lawn, sews half of a snap fastener on each edge near the corners, the other half to a piece of tape or ribbon, and thus is able to anchor the cloth by means of the tapes.

For more formal summer tables, table cloths of palest pink, blue or green slipper satin are stunning. These can be made at home, of course, finished with hand-rolled hems or hem-stitching.
